Tim Fitzgerald of Fitzgerald Projects recently managed a small project for my sister Maria Morley and myself. The project was to convert a former garage into an en-suite bedroom, integrating it with the existing house and its garden surrounds. Tim was an excellent manager of negotiations with the local council and other authorities. He was always responsive to our queries and to our changing ideas as the project continued, and we always felt that the project was in good hands.

James Walsh Buckley worked at my residence recently and became a most effective site manager while Tim Fitzgerald was on vacation. At all times James was pleasant and courteous in our dealings. His attention to detail was exemplary and he was happy to adapt to any small changes or new ideas which emerged during the project. James has excellent communication skills and followed through promptly on all suggestions.

My brother, John, and I were delighted with the finished product and I would not hesitate to recommend James for any similar or larger project.
